My interests in water and understanding, as described by Mario Pernola's concept of a multi-layered reality (Transit), is to reflect heavenly beauty in everyday life. The art offers vitality, inspiring empathic conversations and actions related to our relationship with water. Through thoughtful resource handling, innovation, and serenity in human relationships, the emotional granularity of analogue images becomes a layer for people to participate in creating pictures of beauty with life. The philosophical foundations embedded in the art inspire conversations on ideas of time, relationships, beauty, movements, sublime rheology, and image making during global technological transitions.

Thank you for reviewing this art, made on 23 September 2015, in Oslo, Norway. I remain a member of BONO, the Norwegian Visual Artist Copyright Society. The presentation is updated on this page of my site:

Movimenti, analogue photography made in 2015, scanned and digitally manipulated in 2018. Subtly different images when placed next to each other create a sense of movement within the viewer.

The original analogue images (as film scan or 35mm viewing strip) are available for private viewing by collectors, sponsors and collaborators for discussions in material applications.

Images can be printed or woven on textiles, paper, vinyl, metal, and other applications such as image transferring for applications vehicles, spacial-kinetic installations, or re-realized for interior and exterior covering or *mosaics.

*SICIS and Artaic, are examples of customisable mosaic companies.
*Equitone is an eternity fibre cement facade material, ultra matte finish for architecture projects. Custom colours can be created.

MOVIMENTI

MULTI-LAYERED REALITY & THE IMAGINARY REALM

Iridescent reflections transform surfaces into images of vibrant serenity. Crossing the processes of analogue photography and digital technologies, the bridge between fantasy and reality is realized through sublimely beautiful color and form. Spacial-kinetic material installations are in development with architecture studios. Original analogue images can be drum roll scanned to adapt to large scale interiors and exteriors, public and private installations, transportation, sport, and lifestyle product applications.
